My Motto in Life

distraction-free zone

Last week, I sat down to answer one email. Just one.
Two hours later, I had:

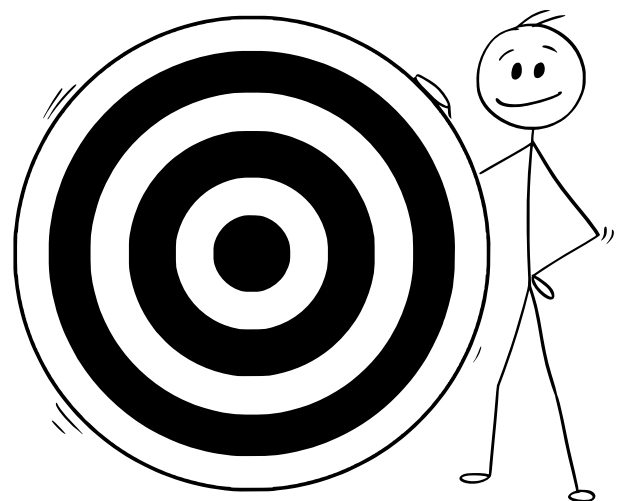

- Googled “best socks for sweaty feet”
- Watched half a video essay about the rise and fall of fax machines
- Added a spatula to my online cart
- And totally forgot to reply to the email.

Sound familiar?

If your brain has a habit of wandering, bouncing, or straight-up ditching you when you need it most, you're not alone. Focus isn't about willpower—it's about creating a space that works with your brain, not against it.

This is a space where you can quiet the noise, take back your time, and train your focus without guilt or pressure.

What does “focus” feel like to me—
and what usually gets in the way?

Some pages will help you get clear. Others will help you reset. All of them are here to support the version of you that wants to feel more present, intentional, and in control of your time.

today's top 3 priorities

Date: _____

It's easy to get lost in a long to-do list. But some days, all you really need is clarity. This page helps you focus on the three things that matter most—not everything, just the right things. One page. Three priorities. That's it.

nice ways to say “not now”

Date: _____

Sometimes, you just need the right words to protect your focus.

Use this page to write polite, confident ways to delay distractions—without feeling guilty or rude. Situations You Might Need a Script For: ● Someone stops by to chat

● You get a text while working, ● A coworker asks for “just a minute” etc.

“I’m in the middle of something—can I check in with you later?”

“Let me write that down so I don’t forget. I’ll get to it once I wrap this up.”

“

“I’m on a focus sprint right now. Mind if I check in with you later?”

my anti-distraction playlist

Date: _____

Sometimes it's not about willpower—it's about the vibe. The right background sound can flip the switch from “meh” to “let's go.” This playlist BINGO helps you figure out what actually works for your brain.

WHEN I NEED TO FOCUS

A song that makes my brain go quiet

A background sound I use while writing

A playlist that makes time fly

WHEN I'M ANXIOUS OR OVERTHINKING

A song that feels like a warm hug

A song that helps me breathe easier

Something soft I play when I'm overwhelmed

WHEN I'M STUDYING OR WORKING

A playlist that keeps me on task

A no-lyrics track I can work to for hours

A study mix I randomly found but love

WHEN I NEED ENERGY OR MOTIVATION

A beat that makes me feel unstoppable

My go-to "get stuff done" song

My best "I'm tired but I have to try" song

WHEN I JUST WANT TO RELAX

A song I play to wind down

A sound I use when I can't fall asleep

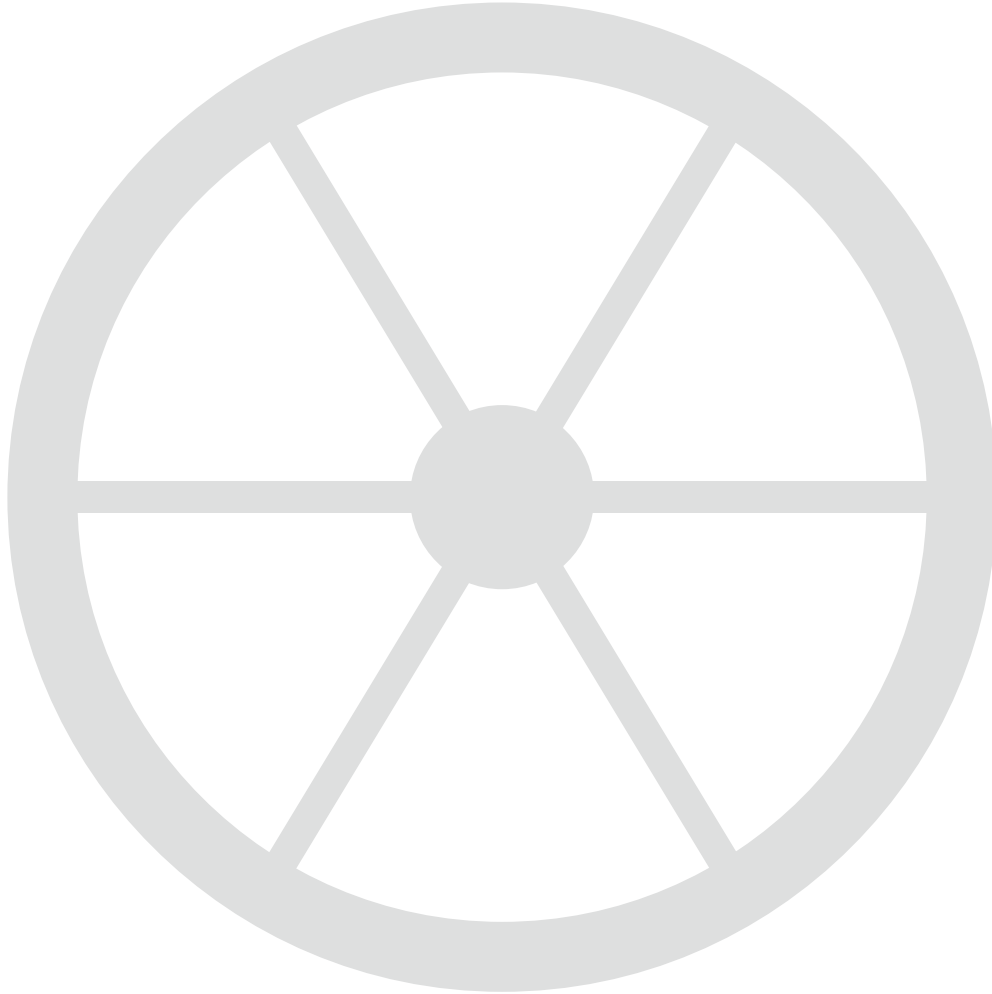

My comfort sound or track
